Y. M. C. A. MEETING HELD

AT RADIATOR PLANT

Tuesday during the noon hour at the plant of the Richmond Radiator Co., the local Y. M. C. A. conducted the third of a series of meetings, with Rev. Charles H. Ricketts as speaker. Mr. Ricketts chose to speak along the line of the 302nd anniversary of the founding of our Republic, as the anniversary occurs today. The speaker said in part:

As this great anniversary day comes again, we do well to think of what the day means or ought to mean to us. The declarations and decisions of our forefathers were not forced on them from without, but they came from within; they did not grow up as mushrooms, but through the years they came forth. England through a parliament of men, that the people should worship according to their dictates, but those brave men said, no, we propose to worship God as we please; they suffered persecutions, but finally realized their hopes.

They set out to cross an unknown and treacherous ocean; it was a long, trying voyage, but finally they arrived in the new land, which they so much desired. It is always a healthy indication when people who are in any way oppressed, seek a new place. They did not leave their homes, but they came out on these shores; they built a meeting house that they might worship; they built along side of the meeting house a school to care for their mental needs, and they created a town hall. They made provision for their religious life, their education and their civil government, and this great trinity then introduced the basis of our great Republic.

Wherever they went they painted these basic foundations, and these gave tone to our American life. These principles grew slowly, but as always the case, things that grow slowly grow strong. On our hills there are great white oaks that have lived 200 years. Up to the time of the Revolution they were used to be a nation of wonderful strength and development, but the period of that war was high ruined us. The great Lincoln arose, the man of the hour, and his words, "Give liberty, give liberty, give liberty, half slave and half free" came from a heart touched by the Almighty. God never intended men to be slaves. The black man has a white heart, and slavery because he may be somewhat inferior mentally is no reason to enslave him.

The statement that "might makes right" is a thoroughly sound principle; we must never submit to this spirit. There is no reason why any race should be slaves. Our forefathers suffered from slavery in many ways. The first fought hard against sickness and epidemics of various kinds; they fought against the Indians and they had many great obstacles, but they ever kept the three great principles in mind: religion, education and civil government, and we, too, have our fighting to do in order to maintain the great principles these men suffered for. It is here in our beloved America where the final destiny of the world will be worked out.

NORWICH REPORTS SCARLET

FEVER AND DIPHTHERIA

Two cases of scarlet fever and one case of diphtheria were reported from Norwich during the week ending Dec. 16, according to the weekly morbidity report issued Tuesday by the state department of health.

The communicable diseases reported from towns in eastern Connecticut during the week were as follows:

Diphtheria—Jewett City 1, Norwich 1, Sam 2, Brookline 1.

Scarlet Fever—Norwich 1, Sprague 2, Mansfield 1, Killingly 3, Danielson 1, Pomfret 3, Putnam 1, Thompson 1, Danielson 1, Thompson 1, Pomfret 4, Putnam 1, Thompson 1.

Whooping Cough—Dorchester 9, New London 3.

Vaccination against smallpox has saved thousands of children and adults in Connecticut from dying of smallpox during the past century. We can not prevent hundreds of cases and deaths from diphtheria that occur in Connecticut each year, says the report.

Typhoid fever, diphtheria in Connecticut, as elsewhere, can be greatly diminished, as can the number of cases, by the use of diphtheria toxin-antitoxin. Connecticut is one of the states where citizens are anxious to save their children from communicable diseases.

Dr. Park of the New York city department of health concludes from his study that immunization by toxin-antitoxin is not necessary before the age of 6 months. His conclusion in the Nov. 4th number of the Journal of the American Medical Association is as follows: "The toxin-antitoxin injections are inadvisable before the age of 6 months. During this time most of the infants receive the antitoxin received from their mothers. Up to the age of 3 months immunizing injections are usually ineffective as the infant is not responsive to the toxin-antitoxin during this period. Under usual conditions it is probably safe to wait until the infant is 3 months or a year old and then to give the diphtheria toxin-antitoxin."

During the first three years there is almost no annoyance from the injections. As the child grows older, the danger from diphtheria gradually lessens and the percentage of those developing local and constitutional reactions slowly increases. The immunization of school children in acting to prevent their contracting diphtheria also lessens the exposure to infection of the younger children of pre-school age in their families.

The diphtheria prophylactic is given in three doses, from five to seven days apart, as is typhoid vaccine, and immunizes nearly all of those who receive it. Slander is a sort of black whitewash.

NORWICH TO OBSERVE EYE

SIGHT CONSERVATION DAY

Aided by representatives from President Harding's cabinet, federal and state officials, university professors, engineers, industrialists and civic leaders, the Eye Sight Conservation Day in the schools. Every school in Connecticut will be asked to join in establishing the new semi-annual custom of Eye Sight Conservation Day, planned by the American system of education.

The Eye Sight Conservation Council is enlisting the assistance of the commission of education in every state, and of superintendents in every county and school district. Connecticut school officials have been provided with a complete Eye Sight Conservation Day program. To execute this plan A. B. Meredith of Hartford, state commissioner of education, and local superintendents throughout the state are co-operating in the Eye Sight Conservation Day movement, including Warren A. Hanson, of New London, Edward J. Graham of Norwich, W. R. Snyder of Storrs, Frank H. P. Clement of Griswold, V. D. Moody of Montville and Waterford, Mary G. Callomere of Essex, Frederick H. Brewer of Groton, S. L. Moore of Plainfield, William L. MacDonald of Putnam, Isadore Dunham of Stafford, E. F. Kimball of Thompson, Egbert A. Case of Windham, Horace P. Turner of Killingly and H. O. Clough of Groton.

The object of an Eye Sight Conservation Day in schools is to discover the fact that a child has a defect of vision or symptoms of a defect, and to determine the cause of "deficiency." It is stated in the suggested program which the Eye Sight Conservation Council is taking up with the Connecticut State Board of Education.

"Eye Sight Conservation Day should be observed semi-annually, shortly after the beginning of each school semester, and should be an integral part of the school program. On this day the educational program should be omitted until the tests and observations have been completed."

Every teacher in the country, according to the council, is a potential crusader for better vision. Teachers everywhere are being given instructions for testing vision. Success in the movement, according to its sponsors, will mean a definite physical advance in future generations of Americans.

Leading universities are taking up the eye conservation movement. Columbia was the first to make it a part of its regular summer school curriculum, and the results attained were so satisfactory that the course will be continued. The University of Chicago, New York university, Ohio State university, Teachers' College, Columbia, and the College of the City of New York have members.

The faculties, identified themselves with the movement. Other active participants are L. W. Wallace, of Washington, executive secretary of the Federal American Engineering Society, and president of the Safety Section of the United States Bureau of Standards and vice president of the American Society of Safety Engineers. John A. T. Gert, United States Commissioner of Education; Allan J. McLaughlin, United States Public Health Service; and Arthur Day, director of the Geophysical Laboratories of the Carnegie Institution, Washington.

The Hoover Committee on the Elimination of Waste in Industry stressed the importance of vision, revealing heavy economic losses because of poor vision. Poor spelling, according to authorities, is due largely to defective vision. The eye of industrial workers are now regarded as an important factor in production costs. Millions of Americans are suffering from defective vision, most of which can be remedied.

Mr. Crowell, who graduated from Goddard in June, was leader of the Glee club last year.

ANNUAL REPORT OF STATE

MANUFACTURERS' ASSOCIATION

The activities of the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut, Inc., during the past year were reviewed in the annual report of President E. Kent Hubbard at the annual meeting of the association which was held Tuesday at the Hotel Taft in New Haven. A number of eastern Connecticut manufacturers were present at the meeting.

In part President Hubbard's report was as follows:

From the appalling multitude of pertinent things on which you expect me to report, I find it rather difficult to select those which will give the most concise idea of the activities of the association during the past year.

When I speak of organization I would like to have you visualize something more than the office in Hartford, with its permanent staff. Our concerns are many, and the influence of the association is felt from coast to coast.

I make this statement with due deliberation and in the files of the association will find the evidence which will support it. Reports on industrial conditions, legislation and transportation are received weekly from every important trade center in the country. Our Washington representatives advise us daily of every legislative and executive action. The association is, therefore, prepared to act immediately and effectively when occasion arises.

Naturally, contact is most intensified within the state. In my successive annual reports, I have spoken of the ever-increasing usefulness and effectiveness of the Connecticut Industrial Council, the association has promoted organizations in the various districts of the state. It has nourished those organizations and has lent them every possible aid because it realizes that a state association cannot live unto itself. It recognizes that mediums for exchange of ideas and information must exist.

An analysis of the membership figures discloses the fact that 265 of our members maintain plants with one to 50 employees. There are 125 concerns with 50 to 100 employees, 153 with 100 to 250 employees, 74 with 250 to 500 employees; 23 with 500 to 750 employees; 18 with 750 to 1000 employees; 18 with 1000 to 2000 employees; 11 with 2000 to 5000 employees and 2 with 5000 to 7500 employees. These figures do not include branches.

During the past year the association has successfully served members in 729 district cases, 473 legislative cases, 474 employment cases, 243 fuel cases, 216 labor cases, 200 sales exchange cases, 117 foreign trade cases, 108 taxation cases, 104 cases in 1922 and 9 general cases, a total of 2,459 separate and distinct benefits to individual members—an average of 50 per week. I will ask you to note that these are absolutely direct appeals for aid and are in addition to all general services performed. This is not only conclusive proof that members need the association, but that they do use it.

Compare this figure of 2,459 distinct services which were given in 1922 with past years. In 1915 the total number of requests for aid were 200; in 1916, 216; in 1917, 320; in 1918, 249; in 1919, 1260; in 1920, 1850; and in 1921, 2,349.

As evidence that our efforts and the efforts of others have been rewarded, I wish you would note that in 1922 there were 84 industrial disputes in the state of Connecticut, compared with 294 workers were involved. The estimated loss in production was $14,519,761.12. The estimated loss to workers in wages was $4,334,118.28 and 745,346 working days were lost. In 1921 the number of disputes was reduced to 27. The number of workers involved was 2804, the estimated loss in production $1,583,450 and the estimated loss in wages $463,692. The total number of working days lost were 122,859.

During the past year, 1922, we have had to contend with only 12 industrial disputes. The number of workers involved was 1,221, estimated loss in production $724,000, estimated loss in wages $166,250, and the total working days lost only 43,167.

These figures are well worth noting as an indication that Connecticut is progressing steadily toward a sound solution of the so-called labor problem.

In addition to the industrial strikes, however, we were harassed by one of the most bitter controversies of the coal strike and the shopmen's strike. Of our part in the coal situation I shall speak later, but in passing, I wish to say that we have recognized the shopmen's strike since July 1, 1922, and continued until October 24. As far as Connecticut is concerned, the 8,519 workers who were involved lost $2,859,692 in wages.

The recurring coal and rail strikes have been a constant source of annoyance to the consumers of fuel in Connecticut. The scarcity and uncertainty of the coal supply has brought home to us most forcibly the fact that the future of New England as a manufacturing center is dependent upon the availability of power independent of coal.

With this thought in mind, your association has made a study of a number of power projects, chief of which is the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence proposal. The result of the study is most interesting and will form an important part of the final annual report.

Although I have spoken briefly of the coal situation, I cannot emphasize too much to mention specifically the relationship of the association with the agricultural interests of the state.

You will recall that in 1920 many of our members exhibited very good results in the agricultural and industrial exposition held by the association in cooperation with the agricultural organizations of the state.

It was, however, the feeling of the board of directors that in view of the rather uncertain business conditions and the great amount of time required to represent the manufacturers of the state, that our participation this year should involve only a money contribution.

I find that it will be impossible to attempt in any way to recount even a part of the most important accomplishments of the work of the association during the past year. I shall, therefore, call to your attention but one more important activity.

Through the state committee the association has been able to be of immediate service to members. In 17 specific instances they have been able to secure direct through car services to northern, southern and western points where no service before existed. They have secured reduced rates and have on numerous occasions reported the membership at public hearings and before various traffic organizations of the barriers. They have interested members in towing rates and steamship rates and in many instances have been able to be of direct vital service to members.
